

Student Senates' 'circus' gives daytime performance

By KEVIN COLE

The UNO Student Senate held a special meeting in the Student Center Ballroom Tuesday. The meeting was held from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., rather than in the evening, so that students could have a chance to observe the workings of the senate.

"It's the only free circus you'll ever see," one senator called to a student before the meeting. "You might as well enjoy it," he added.

In its first attempt at a daytime meeting, the senate outnumbered its audience. Senator Jamie Harold said she thought the idea was good because it gave the students an idea of what the senate is like.

"If the weather was rotten, we might have had more people here," she said. "But it's a good start, and it shows the students we are accessible."

The senate followed its standard agenda, which calls for an open forum of discussion. However, the time limit on the meeting did not allow for the discussion. Student President/Regent Guy Mockelman said he had hoped the students would have a chance to give their input to the senators.

"I would have liked to see the open forum at the beginning of the meeting, but maybe we can do that next time," he said.

One student, Melanie Burke-Mills, did accept the senate's invitation to speak on a resolution supporting a child-care center. "It's one way for parents to get back to school. There were many times when I have missed class because I had to stay home with my children," she said.

Burke-Mills said she thought the meeting was a great way for the senate to solicit student input. "I don't have the time to participate in student government myself... this is an opportunity for students to be heard on subjects that concern them," she said.

The resolution, SR 83/84-21, was passed by the senate on a roll call vote, 18-2-0-1. SR 83/84-21 provides $10,000 for the establishment of a child-care center on the UNO campus. The money will be added to $10,000 set aside last year in SR 83-9.

Before SR 83/84-21 can go into effect, the administration must approve a child-care center within a five-year period from the initial SG-UNO allocation. "We are prepared to raise a total of $50,000 toward that goal," Mockelman said.

A companion resolution, SR 83/84-22, was postponed until the May 3 senate meeting, because several senators disagreed with the wording. The measure proposes the $20,000 child-care allocation and accrued interest be placed in Federally Insured Certificates of Deposit (C.D.'s). Any additional allocations would also be placed in C.D.'s.

Senator Brad Kaciewicz, one of four sponsors of SR 83/84-22, said he thought some senators objected to the wording of the measure because "it wasn't their baby."

Kaciewicz said some of the disagreements with the language of the resolution were "dealing with minute, mundane idiosyncrasies." However, he said he understood the senators' point-of-view. "They're trying to ensure that we are going to meet our goal," Kaciewicz said.

Senator Daniel Pollack was one of those who had trouble with the resolution. "I like the idea, (of the center) but this is lousy legislation the way it's worded."

Mockelman said differences over SR 83/84-22 can be ironed out. "The only problem was the language on the C.D.'s. I think we all agree in general on the idea."

In other action, Joseph Wood, President of the Faculty Senate, presented the student senators with a resolution passed by the faculty. The resolution expressed appreciation for support given to the faculty by the Students for Quality Education during the recent discussions of UNO program cuts.

Wood also said that fund-raisers for the Paul L. Beck Memorial Scholarships have thus far netted $900. "We are doing so well, we may have to increase the size of the scholarships," he said.

Dick Gregory tells how to solve America's problems

By CHRIS MANGEN

Dick Gregory says he can solve America's problems by doing just one thing: Replacing all the elite whites with blacks.

"You would not tolerate niggers doing to you what white folks do to you," Gregory said. "If black folks took over the Mafia and sold drugs to your children, you'd squash 'em in 24 hours."

Gregory, who began his career as a comedian and has become known as a civil rights activist, spoke in the Milo Bail Student Center Ballroom Tuesday night. He addressed topics ranging from the burning of Michael Jackson's hair to Americans' fear of communism.

"I really don't see how I can stand here with a straight face and say I'm glad to be in Omaha," he said as he first addressed the audience.

He said he wished he could have been in Omaha a month ago during the cold weather, so he could irritate the CIA and FBI agents he claims follow him.

Just before coming to Omaha, he said, he had a phone call from pop singer Lionel Richie. He said Richie asked him whether he should do a 7-UP commercial.

Gregory advised against it, explaining that two black superstars had already been hurt by soft drinks, Jackson by Pepsi and Richard Pryor by Coke.

"As much money as Pepsi got off Michael, 7-Up would probably fry Lionel."

After joking about soft drinks, Gregory condemned them and much of the food Americans eat.

Americans know much of the food they eat and drink isn't good for them, but they eat it anyway, he said.

"You don't give a damn about yourself or your children, that's American," he said. "They print shit on the side of the food, and there's 12 things you can't pronounce, and you eat it anyway."

Besides eating more fruits and vegetables, people need to exercise more, he said, and avoid drugs.

Americans can't quit smoking because it may damage their bodies, "but if scientists told you smoking would corrode the engine, there'd be no more smoking in the car," he said.

And though he urged blacks to exercise, Gregory said many

Lynn Sanchez

Answering questions . . . Political activist Dick Gregory.

black athletes are being exploited.

"Ya'll are goddamn more interested in football than developing the human spirit."

Apparently referring to former Nebraska player Mike Rozier, he said, "That nigger can outrun Jesus with a football. Someday ya'll are gonna have to be insulted as being gladiators," he said.

Gregory said parents of blacks should not encourage children to look to sports as a way of advancement in society. "A huge percentage of those athletes end up on coke and on drugs because they have to face the real world eventually," he said.

Blacks are being used in sports now as they used to be used in slavery, he said. White people sit in the stands and watch, while blacks do the work, he said.

The power is in politics, not athletics, he said.

And Gregory had a tip for the Rev. Jesse Jackson, who he said he tried to discourage from running for president. "You're too nice-looking to be running against those ugly white folks," Gregory said he told Jackson.

But what should Jackson do if he really wants to wrap up the Democratic nomination? "He should spread the rumor that he's Michael Jackson's uncle," he said.

Gregory recalled when reporters asked him about Jackson using the racial slur, "Hymie," to describe Jews. Gregory said he denied it, because Jackson had.

Then he saw Jackson on a TV debate. "Jesse said 'I don't recollect,' and I said, 'he did it.'"

"If my wife had asked me about a woman 15 years ago, and I say I can't recollect, I got to pack my shit and leave."

Gregory repeatedly stressed to audience members that "You can make a difference." But apparently he doesn't think going to college is the answer.

"The system don't educate you, it trains you to make a living," he said. "The true learning doesn't happen in universities, it happens in your head."

He called integrated colleges "cesspools of hatred" and urged blacks to attend black colleges. He said graduates of black colleges were more successful. But he added, "You ain't got no good schools in America."

Some other issues Gregory addressed included:

— Communism. "White folks react to communism the way niggers used to react to ghosts."

— The failure of ERA. "If white boys ain't willing to liberate white women, you know your mammy is in trouble."

— Breast cancer. "The doctor's there playing with your titties and charging you for it. Play with your own titties."

— The failure of blacks to support adequately the NAACP and other organizations. "One day when the comedown come down, you ain't gonna call the Jacksons."

— Fasting. "When I look at the obituaries, there ain't no fasters, just you eaters." He said he hasn't eaten for 43 days.

Bunny mystique attracts students

By KENNY WILLIAMS

Those patented satin ears arrived just in time for Easter.

Sunday through Tuesday, more than 700 area women passed through the doors of the Omaha Sheraton Inn, 4888 South 118th St., vying for the chance to become a Playboy Bunny.

Freshman Tamara Haggin was one of several UNO students who waited hours for a five-minute interview Monday afternoon.

"I already work as a cocktail waitress at Ross," she said. "An opportunity to be a Bunny would be worth it, just for the chance to be able to say that I was a Playboy Bunny."

Tamara was joined by UNO junior Gina Gottsch, who said the glamour and money of the job influenced her to try out.

"Some of the girls who come out think that being a Bunny is all glamour and prestige," said Bunny Pamela, who was flown in from Chicago for the event. "If that's all they think it is, then they're wrong," she added. "It's not; it's hard work. You really have to work for your money."

Pamela, who said it is one of the Bunny rules not to give out last names, was one of several Bunnies on hand to answer questions from nervous applicants.

As Gottsch, Haggin and UNO junior Debi Bails sat around a table waiting to be interviewed, Pamela filled them in on some Bunny rules.

"There's no eating, no smoking and no sitting," she said. "You can perch, but you can't sit."

She demonstrated by placing her hip on the back of a chair. She said if selected, the girls would go through an extensive two- to three-week training session, where they would learn such things as applying makeup and properly serving food and drinks.

"You can't just walk up to a table, lean over and hand out the drinks," Pamela said. "For two obvious reasons."

She then demonstrated the "Bunny Dip," the proper technique of distributing drinks in the ladylike Bunny style. In addition to the job at the club, Bunnies have the chance to represent Playboy at other functions.

"We also attend charity events, do promotional work and make personal appearances at hospitals and conventions," Pamela said.

Dina Kaluza, junior, and Janice Morgan, sophomore, were among the more than 400 women who showed up Tuesday for the last interview session.

Kaluza clutched a small stick on which a piece of paper with the number 365 was attached. This designated her place in the interview order.

"I'm doing it for my newswriting class," Kaluza said. "I was going to write an article on it, and my teacher suggested that it would be better if I went ahead with the interview."

Morgan, a drama major, saw the prospect of being a Bunny as an opportunity for better things.

"It would be a good job to use as a steppingstone to modeling or acting jobs," she said. Morgan said Playboy's image did not affect her decision to try out.

"It's a clean magazine, which appeals to fantasy," she said. "It also has excellent interviews."

During tryouts, each girl went into a dressing room to change into leotards or swimsuit. They then waited for the short interview with Harriet Bassler, International Bunny Mother.

Joy Flynn, sophomore music major, was interviewed late Tuesday afternoon. Dressed in a bright pink one-piece bathing suit, Flynn strode nervously into the interviewing room. Bassler asked her the same questions she had asked the nearly 500 girls who preceded her:

Why do you want to be a Playboy Bunny? Are you employed now? Why do you think you'd like to work for Playboy? Did you chat with the Bunnies here? Do you have any questions? Then Flynn demonstrated a quick but graceful walk and the interview was over.

Flynn, who is a Brigade member at the Firehouse Dinner Theater, said a job as a Playboy Bunny would allow her to meet the kind of people attracted to the Club. The image of Playboy magazine did not bother her.

"I think it's more respectable than other magazines of that type," she said.

"They really take care of the girls who work here (at the club). It's not a disrespectful job. In fact, it's probably safer than working at some of the other bars in town."

Flynn said she told her mother she was going to try out. "At first she said I was flaunting my body," she said. "But I told her that it was no different than being in a pageant or a cocktail waitress."

Each girl who tried out will receive a complimentary key good for one year. The key, which costs $25, allows the holder to enter any of Playboy's 16 clubs around the world. Also included are free copies of Playboy and Games magazines, discounts on Hertz rental cars, the Playboy preferred discount dining and entertainment program, Compu-U-Card toll-free discount shopping and Playboy Keyholder Specials.

Looking for input

The UNO Student Senate was looking for input from its constituents Tuesday. For the first time, the senators met during the day. They also met in the ballroom of the Student Center, instead of the isolated second floor Dodge room.

Students strolling by seemed surprised and a little bewildered by the parliamentary process. But for the most part, very few hung around to watch.

One student, near the back of the room, was anxious for the senators to clear out. "I want to know how long this shit is going to last," he said.

Instead of automatically putting down the meeting, perhaps he should have sat down and listened in. The senators were discussing, among other things, the allocation of $10,000 for a UNO child-care center.

Guy Mockelman, student president/regent, admitted the meeting didn't go as smoothly as he'd hoped. The meeting wallowed in rules, procedures and amendments to amendments. "Sometimes the meetings go well, and sometimes we struggle," he said.

Still, in the session from 11 a.m. until 1 p.m., the senators passed the allocation for the child-care center and took up as much other business as time allowed.

All-in-all, they put in a day's work to the best of their abilities. One flaw in the meeting was a lack of time for students to speak to the senate on general issues.

Rather than run short of time at the end of the session, the senate should allot the students time to speak at the beginning.

The senators were generous enough with their time to make adjustments in their class schedules for the meeting. Next time, more students should be generous enough with their time to attend.

Glorified waitresses

Maybe I'm strange or something, but I never wanted to be a Playboy Bunny.

The thought didn't even cross my mind until it was announced that Omaha was going to have a Playboy Club of its very own. This is the big time, folks. Why go to the Razzle Dazzle when you can have your very own Bunny wait on you for only $25 a year?

What really shocked me was that one of the Playboy interviewers told The World-Herald that one out of three applicants wanted to be a Bunny since childhood. One or two I'd believe. One out of every three seems to be stretching things just a little.

There must have been some interesting conversations in those homes. "Sweetheart, what do you want to be when you grow up?" asked Mommy.

Little 5-year-old Janet smiled at Mommy. "I want to be a bunny, Mommy," she said.

Mommy laughed. "Don't be silly, dear, girls can't be bunnies."

"Can so," Janet said. "Playboy says so."

Mommy turns three shades of green. "What?" she gasped. "How did you hear about Playboy?"

Moving back to the present, Janet grows up and gets the chance to fulfill her childhood dream of wearing high heel shoes, a strapless bathing suit-type outfit and those famous rabbit ears.

"Being a Bunny has always seemed so glamorous," she said. This time, Mommy doesn't turn three shades of green when she hears that little Janet wants to be a Bunny. Mommy is relieved that little Janet is finally going to get a job and move out of the house.

She goes to the auditions and finds hundreds of women standing in line waiting for their chance to show they're Bunny material. It is almost like show business, except that all these women are auditioning to be waitresses.

Somehow, I seem to like my glamour with a lot less work. Even for almost $300 a week, getting drinks, running around in high heel shoes while wearing a costume which defies all the laws of gravity by staying up, enduring groups of drunks on the off chance that someone is going to discover me and put me in a photo spread called "The Girls of Omaha" just doesn't sound like a whole lot of fun.

In fact, it sounds an awful lot like being a cocktail waitress.

Speaking of Playboy, the whole issue of having an Omaha club has done a lot to separate the hicks from the sophisticates. Don't jump to conclusions. You can't say that sophisticated people all support the club or that all hicks are against Playboy.

The sophisticate's argument for the Playboy Club: "Playboy has always featured the best entertainment, food and drink in their clubs. It's a good place to have a fun night out, dress up a little, impress a date."

The hick's argument for the Playboy Club: "Playboy? That's the magazine with all those naked ladies in there, isn't it?"

* * *

I don't usually read the sports page, but Saturday I spotted what may be my all-time favorite story (at least until the next one comes along).

This is the sad tale of a baseball team which hasn't won a pennant since the mid-1950s. According to legend, the Cleveland Indians were suffering a losing season in 1955 (I know I can count on you true baseball fans to correct me if I'm wrong) and, as losing teams are in the habit of doing, fired its coach.

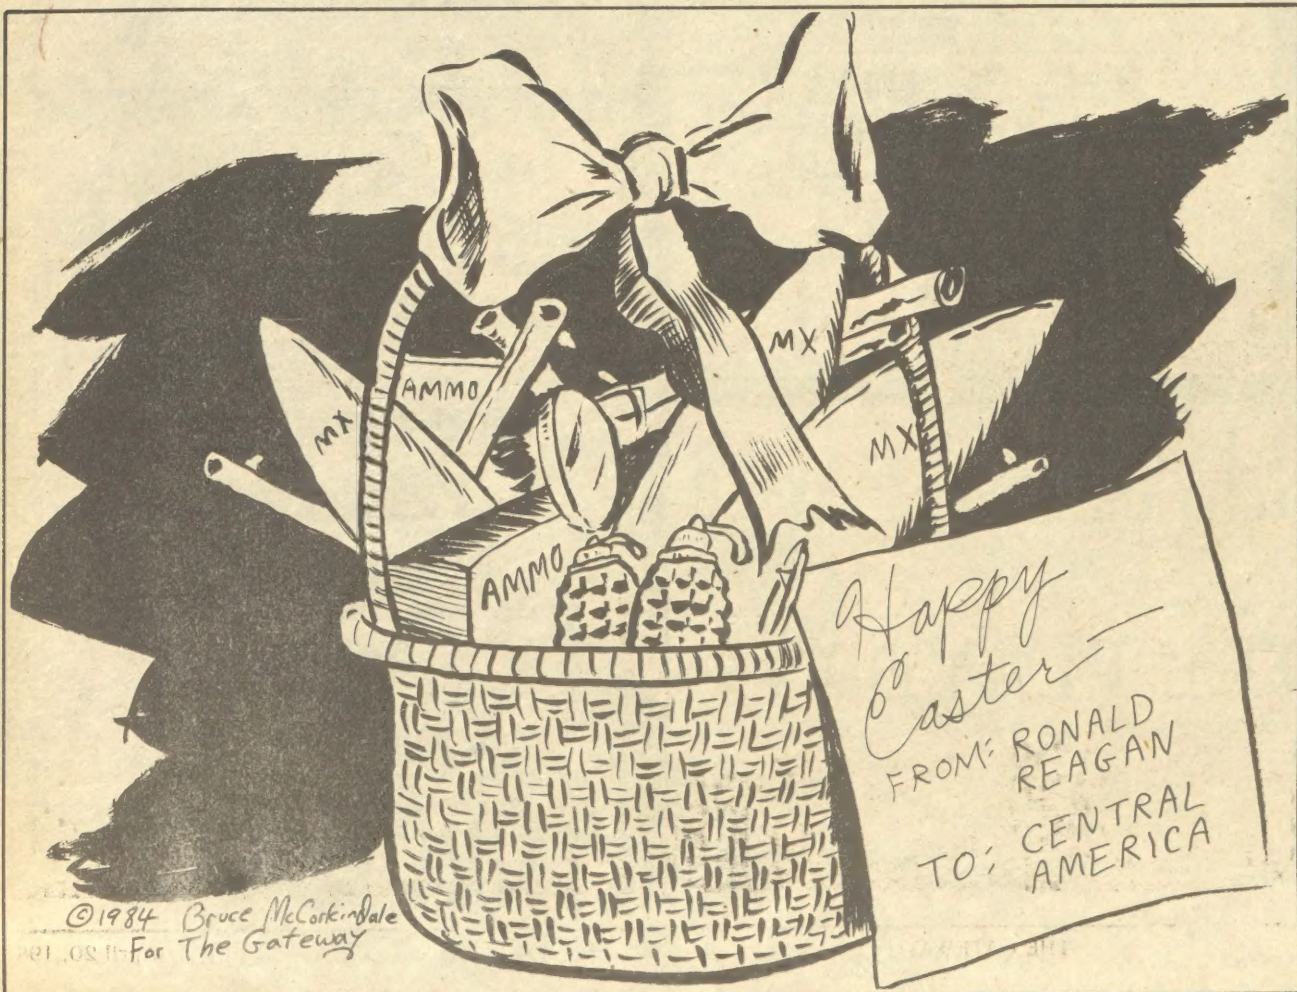

The coach was so upset by this that he allegedly put a curse on the Indians preventing them from having another winning season. Apparently, the curse worked. The Indians sometimes came close to becoming champions, but never quite made it.

Well, I'm sure you'll all be relieved to know that the curse has been lifted. A radio station hired a witch to come to the ball park, sprinkle a few herbs around, mutter a few spells and in general do whatever it is that witches do. After a bit of this, she packed up her spells and told the press, "The curse is lifted. How the Indians do now is of their own making."

What an excuse! No wonder the world is so reluctant to let go of superstition. On mornings when I oversleep, the bus doesn't show up on time and everything else goes wrong, it would be a lot easier to blame it on a curse than to face reality.

Facing reality would mean I'd have to admit I should have gone to bed earlier, the bus may have had to take a detour and maybe things can't turn out the way I'd like most of the time. It means I'd have to think for myself. I'd have to take responsibility for my life . . .

I can't take it! Someone put a curse on me, quick!

Musican-comedian Tim Cavanagh of Chicago will appear from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday, April 26, in the Student Center. Cavanagh's song "I Wanna Kiss Her" has been No. 1 on the nationally syndicated radio program, "The Dr. Demento Show" and is available on Dr. Demento's latest album, "Demento's Momentos." His toast to Britain's royal couple, "C'mon, Drink Up, Chuck and Di," also has been featured on the show.

formed. Nestico's arrangements of "Moten Swing," written by Buster and Benny Moten, and the traditional tune, "Little Brown Jug," will also be presented.

Other selections include Duke Ellington's "Don't Get Around Much Any More" and Ken Harris' "Another Excuse to Play the Blues," which will feature solos by everyone in the 19-member group.

The lab band includes six saxophone, four trombone, four trumpet and five rhythm players. The concert is free and open to the public.

UNO at the Orpheum

One hundred UNO students will appear in concert with the Omaha Symphony on Thursday, April 26, at the Orpheum Theater.

Featured in a performance of "Daphnis and Chloe" will be the University Chorus, one of four major vocal ensembles at UNO. The 30-minute work by Maurice Ravel is known for its distinctive Latin flavor and consists of two suites which will comprise the second half of the symphony's performance.

Tickets for the concert are $6.25, $12.25, $15.25 and $17.25 with group rates available. For more information and to order tickets, call the Omaha Symphony at 342-3560.

Buda: we can't become complacent

By ERIC OLSON

No final decisions regarding positions will be made after today's football scrimmage, according to head coach Sandy Buda. Those can wait until the fall.

"We won't have anything decided until it's time to play Northeast Missouri State," Buda said. "Spring is the time for experimentation. We'll have 29 practices before the first game."

UNO will open its season Sept. 1.

All the coach is looking for in today's scrimmage is good effort from the players. It starts at 4 p.m. at Caniglia Field.

"If a player is going to make a mistake, I want him to make a full-speed mistake," Buda said. "We're a veteran ball club and we can't become complacent during the last week of practice. We don't want to let our minds wander while we're on the field."

The Mavs have made good progress, according to Buda, but it's hard to tell just how good they are. "You just hope they improve every time they step on the field," he said. "If the defense looks good, you don't know if your offense is good. It works both ways."

Buda said he is primarily concerned with the linebacker and tight end departments. Mark Watkins, Steve Hoy and Darrin Lintner have emerged as the top three inside linebackers. "All three of them can play against the run, but their passing games need work," Buda said. "Lack of experience is the big thing."

Two of the three saw action last season. Lintner and Watkins made 11 and three tackles, respectively.

Gary Keck and Keith Coleman return plenty of experience at outside linebacker.

Kevin Munro is Buda's No. 1 tight end, but the depth ends there. Munro made 12 receptions last year for 130 yards.

Senior Jeff Pate is the No. 2 tight end. He will split his time at that position and as the punter. Steve Macaitis was moved from running back to No. 3 tight end. Both Pate and Macaitis are untested at that position.

Sophomore Tim Krof and junior Don Brummer may have the best hands on the team, he said. Buda singled out Krof as having an "extremely good" spring. The Omaha Bryan graduate has caught seven passes for 124 yards in two scrimmages.

Krof remains the No. 2 split end, though. That's because James Quaites, a sophomore from Omaha Northwest, is the most established Maverick receiver, Buda said. He caught 47 passes for 910 yards last season.

In the wake of last Saturday's scrimmage, Buda has made several lineup changes. Senior Mark Murphy is now the No. 1 right tackle, ahead of sophomore Jim Nekola. Thurman Ballard is now the No. 1 left tackle and sophomore John Hower moved from right tackle on the second team.

Sophomore Don Sedlacek moved ahead of Forrest Roper at left cornerback on the second unit; Gary Baker was switched from free safety to strong safety; and Shawn Sich moved up to No. 2 free safety.

Buda hopes today's scrimmage, the Mavs' last, will prepare the team adequately for next Sunday's spring game. He said the game, set for 1:30 p.m. at Caniglia Field, should provide some fun for the players. "The only bad thing about it is that you have to hit your friends," he said.

Mavericks split pair; return home today

The UNO baseball team will play Bellevue College today, after splitting a double-header with South Dakota on Tuesday.

The Mavericks, 9-8 overall and 7-1 in the North Central Conference, won the first game 8-6 and lost the nightcap 5-3.

UNO was powered in the first game by a four-run sixth inning, highlighted by three singles, a double and a walk. Third baseman Ed Dineen slugged his fourth home run of the season in the first. John Weatherly notched the win for the Mavs.

The Jackrabbits scored three runs on a Joel Erdman triple in the four-run fourth inning of the second game. Mark Noble singled in the other run.

UNO scoring came on a sacrifice fly in the first by Dineen, an RBI single by Mike Grandgenett in the fourth and on South Dakota State miscues, which allowed Pat Gibbons to score in the fifth.

Greg Rutherford was tagged with the loss for UNO. As in the South Dakota State games, hitting leaders for UNO were Dineen, Dick Dineen and Grandgenett with averages of .434, .400 and .361, respectively.

The Mavs will play Bellevue College tomorrow in a 1 p.m. double-header. Today's game begins at 1:30 p.m. at College World Series Park.

Notes

Cindy Havel of Ralston has signed a national letter of intent to play softball at UNO, head coach Chris Miner announced Tuesday.

The 5'6" 130-pound infielder played basketball, volleyball and ran track at Ralston High. "Cindy is an excellent defensive player who can hit and run the bases well," Miner said.

This weekend, UNO will compete in the Missouri Western Tournament in St. Joseph. The Lady Mavs, 8-4 on the season, will enter the tourney ranked 17th in the Division II National Softball Coaches Association poll.

Freshman Kathy Gass leads the team in hitting with a .381 average. Jackie Beedle and Karol Ulmer are both hitting .378 and Deb Hensley is at .344. As a team, UNO is hitting .280.

NCC commissioner named

St. Cloud State Athletic Director Noel Olson has been named North Central Conference commissioner, league president Dave Forbes announced Tuesday. He will assume the post July 1.

Olson replaces R. D. "Dewey" Halford and will become the fourth commissioner in the conference's 63-year history. "This is the type of position I always thought would fit my talents best," Olson said. "I feel good about assuming a leadership role in the North Central Conference."

RAINIERS CAPTURED NEAR CLATONIA

Rainier Brewing Company, Seattle, Washington

B.L.T. "Buck" Strangerman, foreman of the crew of Cold Trappers who recently rounded up two Mountain Fresh Rainiers near the West Fork of the Big Blue, met last week with Pickrell members of the Nebraska Fresh Corps. Said B.L.T., "We captured 'em, we snapped their tops, we tapped 'em, an' we sure enough drank 'em. They are beers, no question - fresh an' friendly an' cool. Right now's their migration time o' year, meanin' there's Rainiers out there now from Brock to Broken Bow, so be on the lookout to capture you some too."
